A Note from Andrea

Dear Cinzia,

As I write this, I am packing to leave for New Zealand. I am going to be a guest of our own Master Facilitator Bev Cole and her husband Julian. I am very excited to be taking such a wonderful trip, and getting to see my friends. I have traveled a fair amount and done several trips on my own, but I do think this is furthest I have traveled, and the longest I have been away from my family. As I was thinking about what to write this month, it came to me that New Zealand was a place that Evana had wanted to visit. She traveled extensively, and I with her some of the time, to visit and train new FFS Facilitators. She will be with me on this trip as she often is, also because Bev and I will be conducting an FFS workshop while I am there.

Of course I am breaking all my own rules on packing: I am checking my bag! I always carry on, but being such a long trip I decided not to drag everything through several airports. So because I have the room, I kept adding, "just in case." Don't hold it against me. I will tell all about my trip in the next Wardrobe Wisdom. Be "seeing" you soon!

With love and blessings,

Andrea Dupont, FFSM

The Healing Power of Clothes

SPRING...IS IT REALLY HERE?

If you live on the East Coast, you are more than ready for it. This is the time of year that we feel hopeful. After a bitterly cold winter, feeling isolated and ready to move, this is a time to plan and play. Having a difficult time getting energized? Do you need some healing power?

Conscious clothing choices can support healing. Try integrating all 5 elements into your outfit to receive the benefit of each.

WATER

Supports serenity & introspection. Water clothes are fluid and light weight Supports serenity & introspection Water clothes are fluid and light-weight, perfect for maintaining the state of mind that allows healing. You can also connect with Water energy by wearing abstract patterns or asymmetrical style lines.

WOOD

Supports health & well-being Wood is the Feng Shui element associated with health. Wear blue or green colors, plant-fiber fabrics (cotton, linen, rayon, etc.), stripes, florals and vertical style lines to attract healing energy.

FIRE

Supports joy & fun Keeping your spirits up is integral to the healing process. Red and purple and shiny or animal-based fabrics (silk, wool, leather, suede and skins) and angular patterns and style lines will Fire up your wardrobe and your spirits.

EARTH

Supports security and nurturing The neutral colors of this element (brown, yellow, earth tones) are very grounding for anyone experiencing health issues. Cozy earth fabrics (such as flannel or soft, textured knits and wovens) wrap you in healing energy.

METAL

Supports control and completion Wear pale colors, shimmering fabrics, polished textures and curvilinear style lines to affirm that you are in control of your own healing and to set the intention for bringing it to completion.

Claret Cosmology

Spring is Here!

By Cinzia M. Fassetta, FFSF

Spring is here! Or, for some of us in the Northern Hemisphere, it's making a more gradual appearance. I can happily say that in the beautiful country of Italy, where I live, spring is finally arriving!

Long gone are the days when March 21 marked the beginning of the sunny season! I remember my first year at school, when I was six and in the process of learning to read and write. One of the first short proverbs I learned to write for our first spring in school was

"21 marzo: San Benedetto, la rondine sotto il tetto"

(translation: March 21, St. Benedict Day, the swallows are nesting under the roof).

Well, I don't see any swallows around here yet, but I feel the warmth of the sun, especially around noon, as the days grow longer every day!

Fashion-wise, spring sees the comeback of jeans, as almost every year. The fabric was originally used for work clothes, as it is resistant and practical; the material was very strong and didn't wear out easily. The fabric got its name from the Italian city of Genoa (Gênes was the French name of the city). "Denim," on the other hand, got its name from the French city of Nimes, where they tried to imitate the Genovese fabric but got a different result instead, although quite similar.

Over the centuries, jeans have become a staple for every wardrobe and for everyone, men and women alike. The fabric is made of cotton, so it has Wood energy (the natural material, originating from a plant and its typical color, in all shades of blue), and based on Fashion Feng Shui®, everyone can wear it, provided you "put your personal stamp on it by fusing it with your Essence" (from Fashion Feng Shui: The Power of Dressing with Intention by Evana Maggiore). So, let's have a look at how the 5 Archetypes wear jeans!

Philosophers, who express their Water energy whenever they wear something creative, might choose a handbag in a dark jeans color with fringes all around it.

BARBARA BONNER Ginger Easy Damask Denim Shoulder Bag

Pioneers, who express their Wood energy whenever they wear jeans, might choose a practical tote with a floral pattern.

Nica Sheila Tote Bag , Denim Flower Print

Pleasure Seekers, who express their Fire energy whenever they attract attention, might choose to wear a body-hugging jeans jacket with many angular details.

*Studded Shoulder Denim Blazer
Grey, LookbookStore*

Peacemakers, who express their Earth energy whenever they wear traditional, classic shapes, might choose to wear a basic shirtdress.

Belt Embellished Denim Dress, Romwe

Perfectionists, who express their Metal energy whenever they wear elegant lines and pale colors, might choose these simple yet stylish heels.
